YOUR OUTDOOR PARADISE

Kremmling is located in a secluded river valley where the Blue River, the Muddy Creek and the Colorado River converge to create wonderful recreational opportunities for fisherman, kayakers and rafters. Wolford Mountain and Williams Fork Reservoirs and the expanses of unspoiled terrain make up this sportsman's paradise. Enjoy fishing in Gold Medal waters, cross-country skiing, ATV, jeep and dirt bike trails, dude ranches, maintained mountain bike trails, and big-game hunting. Wolford Mountain Reservoir is a 1,500-acre alpine lake with camping and recreation access for the disabled, as well as dog trails and a children's playground.

Looking for a nice quiet hike with some sightseeing?

The Kremmling Cretaceous Ammonite Site is the place to go. The 160 acres provide a unique opportunity to view giant ammonites and other associated marine species, as well as oceanic, climatic and paleoecological changes. It's located on County Road 26, just north of Kremmling. Visit the local Bureau of Land Management office for a map. If "exciting" is more your speed, consider a rafting trip down the Colorado River. Kremmling has five major rafting companies that offer a variety of experiences for all skill levels. Call the Chamber to request their brochures.

Kremmling's annual events are fun for the whole family

Kremmling Days, held the third weekend in June, sparkles with live music, shopping, kids' activities, a parade, the Cliff Golf Tournament off the famous Kremmling Cliffs, and the Kremmling Classic trail races. The Fire Up the Cliffs Fourth of July offers live music, an all-American pie sale, and the Fireman's BBQ. At night, you'll have an extraordinary view from Town Square Park: fireworks launched off Kremmling's famous cliffs. The second week of August plays host to the Middle Park Fair & Rodeo, followed by an Old Fashioned Country Dance in September. From May to September, trail runners can compete in Trail Runs that loop you through diverse terrain around Kremmling. Even winter is full of activities, with ice fishing contests and various snowmobile events.
